

FUN FACTS

1. The two winning dads have four kids between them – all boys! Can we say active!
2. Brady Breese and Salvador Garcia are not your ordinary bakers. Breese was a football player, a physical therapist and a financial advisor. Salvador was in construction for 20 years.
3. Guess who OllieCake is named after? That's right, Brady and Shaun's adorable two-year old Oliver. What you might not know is Ollie dreams of cupcakes & dinosaurs at night.
4. The day of the audition Breese was sick with the flu. Everyone was sick! In fact, even Ollie was sick. Everyone got it together, ate some cupcakes and in two hours got the audition tape done.
5. Similar to when Prince the artist decided to change his name, Urban Cookies decided to dust off their OllieCake brand and compete with a whole different name. It's not all about cookies ya know!
6. For five excruciating months, Urban Cookies kept the secret. Not one, not three, but five! Customers, friends, it was like throwing a surprise birthday party.
7. Behind every successful man is a successful woman! Shaun Breese marketing guru holds everyone together. She gave our duo dads a checklist before they embarked on their trip to LA. Spatula? Check!
8. Vroom! Vroom! Breese and Garcia jumped in their Urban Cookies van and drove to the audition. Yes, they were given the option to fly, but our champions wanted to relax and drive.
9. During the faceoff, Breese and Salvador must have tasted 200 pounds of batter between them. That's equal to a year's worth of nutrition.
10. We are excited to be Phoenix's first dancing dad Food Network Cupcake Wars winners!
